

The “Wins for Kids” charitable campaign, a program run jointly by the Colorado Rockies and FSN Rocky Mountain, enters its fifth season in 2010. In the past four seasons, it has generated over $200,000 for children’s charities in the Denver area.

This season, Rockies shortstop Troy Tulowitzki wanted to get involved with the campaign by growing a mullet for kids. He has promised to grow out his mullet as long as fans are donating to the “Wins for Kids” campaign. Information and photo updates of Tulo’s mullet will be on our website.

All proceeds from “Wins for Kids” will be donated to The Children’s Hospital and Special Olympics Colorado. Fans are encouraged to donate online at coloradorockies.com/mullet. They may also donate at Coors Field at the ticket windows and Guest Relations center.

Checks should be made out to Colorado Rockies Baseball Club.

Fans who donate $25 or more will receive a special mullet hat. Reserve yours today!
